FLS190519 This is by far the worst decision I have made managing my business. The concept is great, but the application could only be worse if it were to be cursed at my customers when they call or text. I've given Verizon 2 months of my hard earned money to fail miserably on a service I got from a totally FREE app in the past. To add insult to injury, I was charged more than $130 over what I was told when I agreed to give it a try. Shame on me for trusting verizon and not doing my own research. If you click on all versions of the app, you'll see that it has 1.5 stars. I just received an email from a customer demanding that I release them from a $30,000 contract ready to start next week, due to a lack of response on our part. I'm beyond frustrated right now. I'm not showing a missed call message from them throughout the day. I'm resetting my phone, and it shows from last Wednesday. Right now I just sent a video to my Verizon rep showing me trying to open a message and app app just crashes. I explained that the latest app update has just made an already terrible system even worse. The answer I got was that I am the only person they have ever had complaining or having problems. I mean, seriously? Has America become so lazy that people think they can lie about something and you won't do your own research? This is how a valued customer for almost 2 decades gets treated. Hi, We apologize for the difficulty you have with our app. Please email us onetalk@verizon.com with more information about your account and device so we can help you further! More!
